THE COVER

• Though the title of the painting is Landing Zone, it could just as well depict Americans pulling out of Vietnam, turning over the fighting to their allies in the ARVN. At the same time the V.F.W., as indicated in Commander-in-Chief Joseph L. Vicites' acceptance speech on page 18, is to be more actively involved with domestic issues. At the 72nd National Convention, this concern was reflected in other major addresses by national leaders in politics, communications and entertainment. Lt. John O. Wehrle was the artist and the painting is from the Army Historical Collection.

V.F.W. OBJECTIVES

- TO INSURE THE NATIONAL SECURITY through maximum military strength.
- TO SPEED THE REHABILITATION of the nation's disabled and needy veterans.
- TO ASSIST THE WIDOWS AND ORPHANS, and the dependents of disabled and needy veterans.
- TO PROMOTE AMERICANISM through education in patriotism and constructive service to the communities in which we live.

CAPITOL DIGEST

BY FRANCIS W. STOVER

Director, V.F.W. National Legislative Service

CAN VETERANS BENEFITS ESCAPE FREEZE? Hearings to be held on the VA pension program by the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee may be the tip-off on what the Administration's official position is going to be on bills to boost VA payments to 6 million veterans and their families. The wage-price freeze is certain to have an adverse effect on the 6 million veterans, their families, widows, orphans and dependent parents. Inflation has taken its toll of increases in compensation, DIC, pension and GI Bill rates. Congress was to have tackled these problems.

VETERANS PREFERENCE ENDANGERED: While President Nixon has been working diligently to find jobs and provide job training for returning veterans, his newly named Civil Service Commissioner, Mrs. Jayne Spain, has been quoted as saying she would scrap veterans preference in hiring men back from Vietnam. Mrs. Spain should realize that only Congress can do this since it is embodied in the Veterans Preference Act of 1944.

SPECIAL CONSIDERATION FOR VETS: The Emergency Employment Act of 1971 authorizes 160,000 jobs in needed state and local public services. One of its provisions is that special consideration be given Korean and Vietnam veterans.

ADMINISTRATION-HÉBERT CONFRONTATION: Treasury Secretary John B. Connally has ruled no military pay raises during the freeze, but as approved by House and Senate—they are to go into effect Oct. 1. It is part of the Draft Extension Bill. Rep. F. Edward Hébert (La.), House Armed Services Committee chairman, has said publicly they will take effect regardless. A confrontation between the Administration and one of the most powerful men in Congress, Hébert, is looming.

PRESIDENT APPROVES EXTRA MONEY FOR VA HOSPITALS: Congress added over $200 million to the VA hospital and medical care budget for 1972. President Nixon promptly signed the bill, which is now P.L. 92-75. Congress made it clear there is to be no cut in VA hospital care. Some 85,500 beds must be maintained on an average daily basis with 97,500 beds in operation by the 165 VA hospitals. This is a setback for the Office of Management and Budget, which has been working overtime for years to reduce and eliminate veterans hospitals.

TEAGUE COMMITTEE ON VA HOSPITALS: Years ago Congress delegated responsibility for establishment, construction and renovation of VA hospitals to the Administration, subject to Presidential approval. The sorry record of the Office of Management and Budget, which would eventually eliminate VA hospitals, has forced Congress to take another look. A bill (H.R. 6568) strongly advocated by the V.F.W. would restore some of this power to Congress and provides that any major VA action on VA hospitals and medical facilities would require House Committee on Veterans Affairs approval.

VIETNAM ELECTIONS AND WITHDRAWAL: A threatened filibuster by Senate doves caused a delay in considering the draft extension bill before the August recess. This legislation (H.R. 6531) may be in other trouble than the military pay raise. Because Vietnam's President Thieu is the only candidate in the upcoming elections, Senate doves may add a provision to withdraw American troops from Indochina within nine months or set a certain date. On June 30 the draft law expired and the Army says it faces a shortage of manpower. Some observers, however, believe the doves have exhausted their ammunition and the draft extension will be okayed. ■

Commander-in-Chief H. R. Rainwater presented National Auxiliary President Mary Cottone with the V.F.W. Gold Medal Award of Merit.

President Richard M. Nixon's appearance at the V.F.W. 72nd National Convention at the Arena of the Dallas Memorial Auditorium Aug. 19 was a high point in the sessions.

More than 10,000 delegates, their wives and families turned out to hear him. In his introductory remarks, Nixon had high praise for the V.F.W. as an organization that speaks out on the issues and Commander-in-Chief H. R. Rainwater as a leader who did not hesitate to express his opinion.

Following are excerpts from his speech.

ON Sunday evening (Aug. 15) I outlined to the nation a bold economic policy designed to build a new prosperity for America—full employment without inflation and without war and with freedom and with opportunity.

It is most appropriate that my travels, across our beautiful country these past three days should culminate here before this great organization of American veterans. For here in your hearts and minds are the qualities America most needs in the stirring days ahead in which we have to meet the challenges of peace.

We need the very best of your soldier's spirit, your veteran's spirit to inspire the great battle for a lasting peace and a new prosperity in America.

It won't be easy—nothing worthwhile ever comes easy. It won't be easy, amid the distractions and temptations of the coming years, to make America remember that the strength that commands respect is the only foundation on which peace among nations can ever be built. The argument for weakness wears two masks, let us see through both:

To those who attack the necessity of strength with the claim that armaments cause conflict, we must answer that the reverse is true. It is conflicts of vital interest which cause nations to arm and nothing but patient, firm, hard-headed negotiations, such as we are now conducting in several important areas, can adjust these fundamental differences and so pave the way for a safe reduction of armaments.

To those who attack the morality of strength with claims that our defense establishment is "militarist" and evil, we must reply that it is war which is evil, and that the "Strength . . . Respect . . . Peace," Nixon asserts.

After addressing delegates, President Nixon meets well-wishers.

vigilance which prevents war is honorable and good.

Let's say this—let this be well understood: We shall devote as large a proportion of our national resources as we safely can to the works of peace. All of us want to do that. We shall take vigorous steps to correct the occasional abuses which are bound to occur in the military as in any other human organization and we are doing that.

But on one point we shall never yield an inch—and that point is our deep pride in the armed forces of the United States and our enduring tribute of gratitude to the men who comprise them, professionals and citizen-soldiers alike.

It won't be easy, either, to follow through on the measures I announced Sunday night to generate 20 million new jobs in the next 10 years, to stop the rise in the cost of living and to protect our dollar against the attacks of international speculation. This hits very close to home.

President Nixon at

The Challenges

And yet the willingness to make short-term sacrifices in the drive toward a long-term goal is the very essence of a disciplined fighting force, and is second nature to veterans like yourselves. I know, therefore, we can count on your wholehearted support in this great work of revitalizing America's economy and rekindling her competitive spirit.

It is essential that these two goals be mentioned together, for they are inseparable. The new prosperity we seek is in no sense a cushion for a self-indulgent old age of this Republic—rather it will serve as the launching pad for new greatness in America's third century.

It was our competitive spirit that made us a great nation, a strong nation, a rich nation in the first place. America needs a rebirth of that competitive spirit today.

This is the challenge of peace, and as I travel across this land I can feel that the American people are ready for it. I see a new confidence in this land, a new birth of faith in ourselves. I see a willingness to face reality, a revival of moral courage, a fresh determination to succeed.

...rives by helicopter.

Of Peace

Nearly 70 years ago, when the organization that later became the V.F.W. was a brand-new group of young Spanish-American war veterans, an American philosopher wrestled with the meaning of war and the problems of peace. The great need, William James wrote, was to find what he called "the moral equivalent of war: something heroic that will speak to men as universally as war does, and yet will be as compatible with their spiritual selves as war (is) incompatible."

Four times since then, America has had to go to war—never for conquest or territory, but because other men did so. Four more times new thousands of veterans have joined the honored ranks of the V.F.W., and other thousands have sacrificed their lives for freedom. Now at last we find grounds to hope that the potential aggressors of this world will turn away from war, which costs so much and buys so little. Now at last we find grounds to hope for peace.

Yet peace itself, as James discerned, brings new challenges of its own. It poses the deep question whether a nation, without some external threat to unite and motivate it, can find a higher inspiration to lift us all above the mire of softness, stagnation, division and decay. Through the turmoil of the Sixties, Americans struggled for the answer to that question, and now in the Seventies an answer begins to come clear.

James's heroic and universal ideal does exist, in a form both rich with age and new with promise. It goes by many names—The American Dream, the Spirit of '76—but essentially it is that unique mixture of liberty and order, justice and opportunity, competition and teamwork, knowledge and faith, which our forefathers envisioned two centuries ago and which, though not perfectly realized even today, has ennobled millions of Americans who have striven for it down the years.

The great challenge of peace is for each of us individually, and all of us as "one nation under God," to rededicate ourselves to this magnificent American dream. With this as our "moral equivalent of war," we can move into a generation of peace and blaze the trail toward a new prosperity with freedom, justice and opportunity without war. With this new Spirit of '76 in our hearts, we can make the third American century our greatest century of all.

Following are additional remarks President Nixon made as deviations from his prepared text at the conclusion of his speech:

"After traveling over America, let me say first it is a beautiful country and second it took a great people to make this country when you think of what they did. They were strong competitors and let's be worthy of those great pioneers."

President Nixon then listed some of the problems facing the nation as "ending the war, winning the peace . . . and seeing that young Americans have a sense of purpose and destiny.

"There is an insidious line that runs through some commentators, that America does not need to be number one," he continued. "It matters very much for Americans to be the leader, to be number one. No other nation in the world is strong enough to negotiate for peace.

"The purpose of being number one is not to make others feel inferior but because once a people resign themselves to being second or third they cease to be a great people."

President Nixon said that history is filled with examples of nations that failed as leaders because they did not maintain their "drive and their vitality."

"Competition is what we believe in," he continued. "Let it not be said of this generation that we were the ones who said it really didn't matter."

He called for "a new birth of vitality . . . to be just as strong as we need to be, we can be. Gen. DeGaulle said that France was her true self when she was engaged in a great enterprise. It is the same with America. Peace is a great good, a great enterprise but we have to have a strong economy for without it we can't have a strong defense. The question for America is far more serious than in the dark days of Pearl Harbor: Do we have the drive, the urge to make this and keep this, the greatest country in the world?" ■

Major figures in American leadership—political, communications, the military, law enforcement and entertainment—attested to the prestige and vitality of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States by joining with the 35,000 to 40,000 members and their families at the 72nd National Convention in Dallas, Texas.

Among the speakers were President Nixon, John Wayne, Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, Col. Wilson E. "Pat" Speir, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety; Sen. Henry M. Jackson (Wash.), VA Administrator Donald E. Johnson, Sen. Herman E. Talmadge (Ga.), Adm. John S. McCain, commander of U.S. forces in the Pacific; Charles A. King, vice president of Mutual Broadcasting System, Louisiana Gov. John J. McKeithen, and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

For the more than 12,000 delegates who attended the sessions, however, there was more to their activities than hearing inspirational and informational messages. Much of their time was devoted to developing the mandates that form V.F.W. policies in the 1971-72 membership year.

Communist China, treatment of American servicemen, veterans benefits, the problems of the Vietnam veteran, such as rehabilitation and employment, and patriotism are all questions embodied in the nearly 175 resolutions adopted by the Convention. (See page 37)

Then, too, there were elections of officers for 1971-72, the more than six-hour long military parade, which gave the citizens of Dallas a chance to see the V.F.W. in all its strength, and the Pageant of Drums in the Cotton Bowl.

Prior to the opening of the Convention, there were various meetings with experts on a variety of subjects appearing before them. During the Convention week special sessions were held with Vietnam veterans in attendance to discuss means of recruiting even more into the V.F.W.

Friday and Saturday, Aug. 13-14
Preceding the actual start of the Convention, the annual National Rehabilitation Conference for V.F.W. Service Officers was held at the Statler Hilton Hotel. Knowledgeable speakers in the fields of veterans benefits, employment and other important areas addressed the group. (For details see page 50.)

Sunday, Aug. 15

Committees named to study resolutions to be acted upon by the Convention began their meetings. (See page 37 for resolutions adopted.)

At the National Security and Foreign Affairs Committee, Donald Easum, of the State Department, discussed Latin America and Dolf Droge, of the National Security Council, updated members on conditions in Vietnam.

T. Y. Chao, representing Nationalist China's government, warned the Committee that Red China's current policy of conciliation with the U.S. is a "trap."

"For over 21 years, the Chinese Communists have never ceased, even for a day, the export of revolution and violence," Chao said. "They constantly spread to all parts of the world propaganda designed to erode men's minds, to facilitate their ideological infiltration and political subversion. And their particular object of their attention always has been the United States."

Chao said the Chinese Communists are not only seeking to damage American credibility and prestige but to "step up their infiltration and subversion activities, promote violence and unrest, build up pro-Mao ultra-leftists forces so as to destroy America from within."

While he can understand President Nixon's motives in planning to visit Red China, Chao said, "I can see only humiliation, and insult, blackmail and distortion in store for the President."

Admission of Communist China to the United Nations and diplomatic recognition by the U.S., Chao said, would only encourage Maoist aggression and lose this country the "confidence and trust of her Asian allies."

He later bestowed a Nationalist Chinese Order of the Cloud and Banner with special cordon to Commander-in-Chief H. R. Rainwater by order of Chiang Kai-shek, president of Nationalist China.

At the annual Memorial Service in the Arena of Dallas' Memorial Auditorium the Most Rev. William J. Moran, a retired brigadier general and auxiliary bishop of the Army's military ordinariate, said that freedom is a two-edged sword that can destroy the nation if not used wisely.

"The freedom we now claim has come to mean freedom from all unpleasantness, from hardship, from discipline, from the stern voice of duty, from the pain of self-sacrifice," Bishop Moran said. (For details see page 36.)

Monday, Aug. 16

Like the Memorial Service, the Joint Opening Session was held at the Arena, with Laird and Wayne the principal speakers. Dallas Mayor Wes Wise, and Texas Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes welcomed the V.F.W. and its Ladies Auxiliary to the city and state on Monday, Aug. 16.

Ted C. Connell, a Past Commander-in-Chief and 72nd National Convention Corporation President, called the session to order.

Laird told the delegates that there can be no negotiation with this nation's adversaries unless its military strength is maintained. (See page 24). Rainwater presented him with the Dwight David Eisenhower Distinguished Service Medal and Laird bestowed on the V.F.W. the Defense Department's Meritorious Service Award.

Wayne received the V.F.W.'s Americanism Award from Rainwater for his "dedication to the principles of patriotism and loyalty . . ." Accepting the award Wayne said that he was being presented with it as a "reminder of your membership no longer with us, of guys who put their love of country above life, of men who fought, suffered and died that we might get a second crack at making this country what it should be—God's guest house on earth."

Other Joint Opening Session speakers were Mrs. Mary Cottone, President, Ladies Auxiliary, who was awarded the V.F.W. Gold Medal of Merit; Joseph McNamara, Commander-in-Chief, United Spanish War Veterans, and Marcus Robertson, 1971 Voice of Democracy winner, who read his first-place script.

J. B. Koch, National Commander, Veterans of World War I, presented Rainwater with a citation for V.F.W. support of his organization's legislative goals.

Kansas Gov. Robert B. Docking addressed the Convention and Raymond M. Clausen, a Medal of Honor winner from Hammond, La., and Mrs. Rosemary Feyerherm, of San Jose, Calif., mother of a Medal of Honor winner, were introduced.

In the evening at the Statler Hilton Hotel Sen. Henry M. Jackson (Wash.), the principal speaker, warned that the Soviet Union is surpassing the U.S. in military power, expressed indignation at continuing criticism of this country at home and praised V.F.W. members for being what he called "the steadfast majority." (See page 25 for details.)

Rainwater presented Speir with the J. Edgar Hoover Gold Medal Award as this year's outstanding law enforcement officer.

Speir described Hoover as a "lawman's lawman who has inspired millions by his search for truth and justice."

"Orderly protest is all right," Speir said, "but murder, arson, treason under any name is a crime and crime should be dealt with accordingly."

The V.F.W., Speir said, "has set an example for all in the free world" and he singled out for special praise the organization's interest in law enforcement and its Drive to Survive campaign.

Tuesday, Aug. 17

Mayor Charles Stenvig, of Minneapolis, Minn., site of next year's National Convention, invited delegates to that city and made Rainwater an honorary citizen.

Rep. Olin E. Teague (Texas), chairman, House Veterans Affairs Committee, called for a fair and objective press that would give both sides of controversial issues. (See page 29 for details.)

Oliver E. Meadows, staff director of Teague's committee, was presented with a citation for his work on behalf of disabled veterans and a V.F.W. Life Membership. Frank Brizzie, staff director of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee, was introduced to the delegates.

Past Commander-in-Chief Richard L. Roudebush, deputy assistant director of the Veterans Administration and a former Congressman, received the V.F.W. Space Award for "his personal contributions to the advance of space technology and space exploration through his service as a member of the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Science and Astronautics."

Accepting the Award, Roudebush recalled that when the Russians orbited their Sputnik in 1957 he was in Munich after his election as Commander-in-Chief appearing on Radio Free Europe, but since then the United States has become the world leader in space exploration.

"To me the highlight of these moon landings has been the implantation or erection of the American Flag," he said.

Reviewing the events that led up to his introduction of legislation to place the Flag on the moon, an outgrowth of a V.F.W. resolution urging it, Roudebush said "in my opinion the sense of pride and accomplishment in what it demonstrates, the implantation and the erection of the American Flag was to me the proudest moment of all our space programs, to see our gallant astronauts place that Flag, stand back and give the military salute."

Donald E. Johnson, VA administrator, pledged that as long as he is in his present post no other agency will assume any of the VA's responsibilities. He also reviewed VA activities over the past year and outlined measures to be taken on behalf of veterans in the coming year. (See page 30 for details.)

Past Commander-in-Chief Raymond A. Gallagher received from Rainwater the V.F.W. Distinguished Service Medal.

Don S. Maupin, President of the National Home in Eaton Rapids, Mich., introduced the Home's Board of Trustees and several of its executives, some of the residents and Betty Davis, the 1971 Buddy Poppy Girl.

Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, who received $10,000 from the Ladies Auxiliary for the Lurleen Wallace Cancer Research Center named for his late wife, told the delegates "a liberal minority wants us to 'drop out,' wants to instill a sense of disgust in the American people by criticism of our role in Vietnam and hopes to turn the entire country against those who believe in a strong defense."

Chairmen of four Convention committees made their reports to the delegates during the session. They were: Past Commander-in-Chief Byron Gentry, Convention Rules; Past Commander-in-Chief Andy Borg, By-Laws, Rules and Procedure and Ritual; Past Commander-in-Chief Clyde A. Lewis, Finance and Internal Organization, and Walter W. Thompson, General Resolutions.

American prisoners of war and men missing in action in Southeast Asia.

On behalf of those captives, Adm. John S. McCain Jr., commander of American forces in the Pacific, was presented with the V.F.W. Armed Forces Award by Rainwater. McCain's son is one of the prisoners.

"Our nation must not be turned aside from its proper course in Southeast Asia," McCain said. "The pressures of some public frustrations with the war must not, I repeat, must not, cause our people to abandon what we have helped to win for the free people of Southeast Asia. We must not initiate an abrupt and consequential pullback of U.S. forces in Vietnam." (See page 22 for details.)

Ten wives of American prisoners were introduced to the delegates. One of them, Mrs. Samuel R. Johnson, of Plano, Texas, and H. Ross Perot, Dallas philanthropist who has worked unceasingly for the men's release, spoke briefly. Eddie Dunn, of Killeen, Texas, presented Mrs. Johnson with a check for $1,000 to aid the prisoners. The money was raised by Killeen High School students.

Charles A. King, vice president of Mutual Broadcasting System, recipient of the V.F.W. Gold Medal of Merit, said "it is about time some of the editorial giants, some of the audio prophets of doom and many of the political pretenders to the throne stopped using the First Amendment to cover sins of omission and rather started to write and talk about the greatness of this nation." (See page 28.)

Three more chairmen of Convention committees reported. They were Past Commander-in-Chief Richard Homan, Americanism and Community Activities; Past Commander-in-Chief Leslie M. Fry, Rehabilitation and Welfare Service, and Past Commander-in-Chief Joseph A. Scerra, National Security and Foreign Affairs.

Wednesday night some 30,000 viewed the annual Pageant of Drums at the Cotton Bowl. (See page 26 for results.)

Coray, director of USO entertainment department, recipient of the Al Jolson Gold Medal Award, and Past Commander-in-Chief Byron Gentry, who read his poem, "GI Joe," the theme of the 1971-72 membership year.

Goals For Tomorrow

On Friday, Aug. 20, Joseph L. Vicites was elected and installed as Commander-in-Chief of the V.F.W. for 1971-72.

In his acceptance speech he praised the "superlative record" of immediate Past Commander-in-Chief H. R. Rainwater and his corps of officers.

Vicites then pledged to strive for even greater success during the coming year and to work for the betterment of veterans, their widows and orphans and their families. Following is the remainder of his talk.

I believe implicitly that it is time for us to reappraise some of our priority goals—perhaps not the goals themselves but the techniques we employ in pursuing them.

For eight full years we have given our wholehearted support to first one President and then another in their efforts to bring the Vietnam war to a victorious close. We have committed ourselves and our resources, without reservation, to the support of the brave young men who fought and still fight that war to halt Communist aggression.

It was our duty to provide that support. The support of our fighting men, anywhere in the world, is our sacred trust. The security of our own nation, and assistance to our allies, is a responsibility we shall never shirk. But our active participation in the Vietnam war is slowly coming to a close. Our combat troops are coming home. Regardless of the personal opinions we may hold regarding it, or the manner in which it was conducted, it is being brought to an end.

We shall continue our efforts to win the release of every American prisoner of war in Southeast Asia. And we shall vigorously oppose any attempt on the part of any political candidate to make the fate of these heroic young men a pawn in the struggle for political power.

It is our primary duty now to direct our energies toward the solution of the internal problems it has left behind. We must direct our attention to the staggering task of picking up the pieces so that this nation under God may once again be whole. The fragments of our national pride lay everywhere about us. Each of those fragments must be welded together once again and bound by the lasting cement of loyalty to the America we love. We are faced by many divergent views: the dissident young; the disgruntled old; the disenchanted and the loyal; the anarchist and the patriot; the hawk and the dove.

Each of us must strive to reopen our lines of communication, and settle down in earnest to solve the problems we all face. If we in the V.F.W. are to contribute our fair share to the solution of these problems we must lay aside our role of "combat engineers" and devote more effort to bridging the gaps of peace which separate us as a people.

This does not mean that we shall yield to that which our experience and patriotism tell us is wrong. It does not mean that we shall weaken our principles, or lessen our commitment to true Americanism. We will never bow to the dogma of the dove, or subscribe to the philosophy of those who preach appeasement and "peace at any price."

It simply means that we will reopen our minds and take a long hard look at the changing times. It means that we must analyze and honestly explore the philosophy of the modern young. It means that we will strive to find a common meeting ground. For these young people are the future of this land.

Abraham Lincoln once said, "This nation cannot exist half slave and half free." Is it also true that it cannot survive as a great nation "half young and half old?" One thing is sure: We must find a reasonable way to bridge the gap between the two. I am determined that we in the Veterans of Foreign Wars shall make a positive effort to solve this national dilemma during the coming year.

We shall develop a program to find employment for every returning Vietnam veteran, in conjunction with the Department of Labor and the governments of every state. We shall call upon the representatives of private industry in every corner of America.

We shall also lend our collective support to the solution of the drug problem among returning veterans. Historically, there has been very little permanent success in this field of rehabilitation. But we shall make every reasonable contribution to the effort.

We shall call upon the military to develop and establish a narcotics education program as a part of basic training—with periodic lectures and training films a mandatory requirement throughout every GI's service. The military should also provide qualified drug-abuse counselors for each unit of a specified size.

We can participate in the creation of a community-wide drug-abuse council which will serve as an exchange point for information among involved community agencies. Our Posts can prepare themselves to serve as information centers to refer any citizen, young or old, veteran or non-veteran, to the proper place for treatment.

As of the moment, we must return to the basic fundamentals of the Veterans of Foreign Wars: to serve the veteran who has borne the brunt of battle, his widow and orphan, and his family. We must redouble our efforts on every level in their behalf, through a revitalized and more effective legislative program.

I call upon each of you to read anew the purposes for which we were chartered by Congress. I assure you that I have already taken that step. I shall strive always to honor the high ideals and noble principles of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

I am determined to devote the major portion of my energy and attention to the internal problems of America. It is time for us to roll up our sleeves and meet the challenges on the home front.

We shall voice our disapproval of the changing of Veterans Day and Memorial Day from days of national respect for the living and the dead who served this country to some meaningless three-day weekend. We shall continue our long campaign for a national cemetery for veterans in every state. Veterans benefits will be our battle cry. Unless we put up a more productive effort to preserve and liberalize those benefits, the Office of Management and Budget, together with the individuals and groups who have long opposed us, will eventually eliminate them. We shall call for a review of the disability compensation rates for the service disabled. Our objective should be to keep those rates equal at all times to the cost of living increase, with some additional adjustments for the more seriously disabled.

The same thing is true for veterans and survivors now living on non-service connected pensions.

Survivors' benefit rates for widows, children and parents of veterans must also be increased. As the cost of living mounts, so should these pension rates.

The G.I. Bill and other VA educational program rates are much too low. Thousands of our younger veterans still cannot afford the educational opportunities we profess to offer them. Rapidly escalating college and university costs impose a financial burden too great for them to bear.

May God grant each of us the strength to match our stalwart men.

I feel both personal humbleness and professional pride as the person selected to accept the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States dynamic symbol of support for our nation's prisoners of war and those missing in action in Indochina.

I consider the reason for this award presentation one of greatest importance. I know it is one which is receiving top priority by the President, Congress, the Departments of State and Defense and in the Pacific command as well.

heroic men as "Man of the Year" focuses attention on this tragic problem.

I sincerely believe, in my area of professional competence and experience, that the American people must be given the facts. Only in this way will our people better understand why the prisoners of war and those missing in action affect our national interests in Southeast Asia.

I stand before you as a representative of those voiceless countrymen—how loud is their silence. Even though prisoners of war of the enemy, the honor and glory of their nation rests upon their shoulders, yet they cannot speak up. Nonetheless, their selfless and heroic example tells us not to lose our sense of perspective in the rhetorical shuffle and pretense that obscures America's national purpose and accomplishments in Vietnam.

These are, indeed, troubled times when every American needs more than ever to sail a steady course. Many are tired of strife and seek an easy way. My conviction, formed by four decades of military service in war and peace, is that there is no easy way.

As the commander-in-chief of all United States Pacific forces, I have the responsibility for the defense of our national interests from Southeast Asia to Northeast Asia and in the entire Pacific. This is a vast area of the world and I constantly move about it to visit all the subordinate commands.

These Pacific forces of which I speak are not just military hardware. They are American men and women, fathers, sons, wives and husbands, flesh and blood, brains and brawn, and above all, spirit. I wish you could see them as I have. It would make you tremendously proud. Theirs is not the easy way. Yet they persevere.

Our nation must not be turned aside from its proper course in Southeast Asia. The pressures of some public frustrations with the war must not, I repeat, must not, cause our people to abandon what we have helped to win for the free people of Southeast Asia. We must not initiate an abrupt, and consequential pullback of U.S. forces in Vietnam.

I am convinced the months immediately ahead are critical for the preservation of all that United States and Allied forces have achieved in Indochina. In the confusion of the public debate we must not lose sight of the fact we have performed the tasks delineated by every President since President Eisenhower first announced support of the Vietnamese government.

It is a fact that today South Vietnam has an excellent chance of survival. We have prevented external conquest and encouraged internal progress and regional co-operation in Southeast Asia.

The American forces in Vietnam have done the job. The war is winding down. More than a quarter-million men have come home. President Nixon's fulfilled pledges and his plan to further reduce the total U.S. troop commitment in South Vietnam are responsible, disciplined acts of statesmanship. They are a result of the reality that pacification and Vietnamization are succeeding. These policies are working. The South Vietnamese are developing the capability for their own defense.

In Vietnam, our country has not and does not have an objective of victory in the classic definition of resolving an armed conflict. We pledged to help the people of South Vietnam protect their freedom. We also pledged to help the South Vietnamese retain the right to decide their own future without outside coercion. We have done just that.

Combat action has declined for our forces. We are well on the way toward ending our ground combat role. I believe our objectives, in the long run, will prove successful.

Do not be deceived by reports of negative results in Vietnam. I would be less than frank if I told you everything is rosy, but the plain fact is that the enemy has not won on the battlefield! He has not and, I believe, cannot win through the ballot box!

We all know the price of liberty is high, that freedom does not Defense Secretary Laird accepts the Eisenhower Distinguished Service Medal from Rainwater.

At the Joint Opening Session of the V.F.W. National Convention Monday, Aug. 16, the Dwight David Eisenhower Distinguished Service Medal was presented to Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird. Following are excerpts from his speech.

I am deeply conscious of the honor you bestow on me, knowing that this award has been made only once before—and, on that occasion, to our President and Commander-in-Chief. I regard it as a recognition of the devoted service of those who serve in the Department of Defense, and I accept it on their behalf.

This award is precious to me for two additional reasons—because it comes from the Veterans of Foreign Wars and because it bears the name of Dwight David Eisenhower.

As a member of the Congress, as Secretary of Defense and as a member of the V.F.W., I have had the opportunity to become thoroughly familiar with this organization. I know how much the V.F.W. does for our country and its people—to help maintain our security, to achieve a greater measure of justice and opportunity for veterans and their families, to relieve human distress and suffering.

It is no reproach to the V.F.W.—or any other veterans organization—to say that your first concern is for veterans and their families. This is no small group—28 million veterans and at least an equal number of dependents.

Quest For Peace

Laird presents Rainwater with Defense Department award on behalf of V.F.W.

Certainly, no group has a better right to express their views on matters that can determine whether our nation will survive or perish than those who have been willing to risk their lives to insure its survival. No one has a better right to receive needed help from their fellow citizens and their government than those who helped to protect this land in times of deepest peril—and who, in so many cases, still bear the scars of conflict.

If the V.F.W.—or any other great veterans organization—is accused of being a special interest group, the response should be that it is indeed—and that its special interest is assuring that the United States continues to be a strong and free and just nation in a peaceful world. This sums up what the V.F.W. is all about.

I want to commend you particularly for your interest in the veterans of the Vietnam war. Two years ago, when I had the privilege of addressing your National Convention in Philadelphia, I recommended that you give special attention to the Vietnam veteran and his needs, that you welcome him into the V.F.W. and give him a responsible role in this organization.

I am happy to learn that 400,000 of your members today—close to one-fourth of your total membership—served in the armed forces during the Vietnam era. This fact makes the V.F.W. a group that has the right to speak in the name of a substantial number of Vietnam veterans. There aren't many that can make this claim.

As I remarked earlier, an award named after Dwight Eisenhower has special meaning for me. It was my good fortune to begin my service in Congress as Ike became our President. And, during those eight years of blessed peace which President Eisenhower brought to our nation, I had the opportunity to observe at close range the greatness of this man and to gain under-

I can't remember a time when so many loud voices were competing with one another in downgrading the nation and all its works. What is utterly misleading is the picture they are giving of America. It's a picture I don't recognize—and I have been traveling in every section of this country and talking with Americans in every walk of life, with men and women who have backbones—and they are the backbone of all America.

If you believed the noisiest voices you would think the time had come to sell your worldly goods and climb the nearest hill to await the Last Judgment. In fashionable circles these days it is the "in thing" to run down the United States of America.

Well, there are some Americans who are discouraged, who have lost their way and their nerve, and who are in a mood to retreat—not just from Vietnam, but from responsibility, from reality, from the challenges of life on the frontiers of a nation and a world in change.

But there are a lot more Americans who think that the thing to do with a problem is to face it—not to throw up their hands or to throw in their towels. And I will put my chips on these Americans, the great steadfast majority.

This country has a host of problems and it is time to face them with confidence and common sense—and in good spirit.

The nation's economy is in poor health. It is running an inflationary fever of 6% or more per year, and there are no solid signs that the fever is subsiding. More than 5 million persons are out of work, and the rate of unemployment is steady at about 6% of the labor force. More than 25% of the nation's industrial capacity lies idle.

The United States is a rich country, but we are not rich enough to pay the price of idleness. Everything that needs doing—from building a good society at home to fostering the conditions of a stable peace in the world—everything worth doing as you know takes

If we are to create a decent environment for a growing population, and we must if America is not to join the ranks of the world's has-beens, we will have to make enormous investments over a long period in the building of new towns, the rebuilding of old ones, and in the related facilities that contribute to the quality of life—schools, hospitals, retirement centers, parks, urban and inter-urban transportation, and so on. And we would all much rather see the unemployed at work on such tasks—and the unemployed would rather be at work on such tasks—than standing in line for welfare and unemployment compensation.

If we are to make rapid and uninterrupted progress toward a society in which men and women of all ages, races, and creeds are treated with justice, feel secure in their homes and on their streets, look to the future with hope and confidence, and live lives of dignity and self-respect—and we must, for that, after all, is what this country is all about—our efforts will fall short unless there are jobs, good jobs, for all who want to work and who indeed are able to work.

resources, the resources that only a growing, full employment economy can provide.

If we are to clean up our air and water, and we must, we will have to make heavy investments to overcome and repair the damage already done. In the process whole new industries will be created, offering large new opportunities for productive employment and, hardly less important, new outlets for the youthful idealism and love of country that have marked our American experience. The way to finance these new industries is out of the expanding output of a full employment economy.

Back To The Colors

After being presented the V.F.W. Gold Medal Award of Merit at the 72nd V.F.W. National Convention, Charles A. King, vice president of Mutual Broadcasting System, had this to say.

Charles A. King, Mutual Broadcasting vice president, addresses delegates.

Commander Rainwater and I first met following his world tour of the Soviet Union, Vietnam and much of Southeast Asia—a tour of time and energy taken on behalf of our American prisoners of war now being held in Communist hostage slavery.

What he did in lending his name, his office and the prestige of this organization to that effort will some day be part of the history of this conflict.

My acceptance of this award is therefore, with genuine sincerity and pride, not just because of the kind words spoken; mainly because of the stature and genuine unselfish devotion Herb Rainwater and this organization represent to the world.

I am most proud when I say "Thank you."

When Commander Rainwater and John Smith advised me of the honor of the award and too, of appearing before you this morning in Dallas, I thought of a young boy who once sat at his grandfather's side in upstate New York, enthralled with stories of a childhood in Europe; how, with a knapsack of food, he was determined to make his way across Europe, working in the fields until enough pennies and dollars had been earned to buy passage to a land which would offer dignity, a challenge and a cause which he was denied in his homeland. He never saw his mother or father again, but found a new love for the nation which adopted him, his talents and his determination; yet never asked anything more than loyalty in return.

That his grandson could share the same platform with such distinguished Americans and speak freely and openly is what the original founders left in legacy to those who followed—and why my pride is for this moment and for a nation which has made this moment possible.

Among the 1.7 million who make the Veterans of Foreign Wars one of the most vibrant and pragmatic sentinels of freedom and concern in this nation; among the half million women who, as the Auxiliary, support the aims and principles of those who lend dignity to this republic; among you are many who have chosen this land as the land of adoption; others have come from those who made that choice years before. We have one thing in common this day in Dallas, not only the organization represented, but the nation we share together.

There is a monument at Gettysburg in honor of the memory of a color bearer who became isolated from his regiment after a charge. The regiment retreated, but the color bearer and several men held their ground. The major sent a messenger through to the boy, "Bring the colors back to the regiment." The boy replied, "Bring the regiment back to the colors."

There is no dispute, no argument with history as to what the V.F.W. has added to the courageous pages of our less than 200 years—or what you have done as civilian Americans to keep this nation intact—because it is there and you know, as I know, that you have done what all Americans need to do, you are indeed bringing the regiment back to the colors.

Recently on a flight to Los Angeles, I was cognizant of the sudden lift of the plane as it left the ground and how almost without warning everything below which minutes before seemed to tower over me as an individual, now became smaller and smaller, and at 35,000 feet the ground voices were mute, the forms like ants and the borders were closing in.

I thought of the fact that somewhere below, in small pockets and areas there were voices still mouthing the words of dissent, there were police lines holding back crowds of young and those who should know better, who cry "revolution" and "pig;" there were newspapers being printed with editorials gutter sniping against those who would dare defend law and order; there were the pseudo-giants of the boob tube who were entertaining the leftist darlings of our time and parlaying misery into

Let's Hear Both Sides

Following are excerpts from his speech.

In this last decade we have been bombarded with news of what is wrong with America.

Often the focus is solely on the negative side—war crimes in Vietnam, poverty, welfare, drugs, hippies and student revolutionaries, the alienated youth, pornography, the rights of the criminal and so on. Our institutions, such as the Pentagon, the FBI, the so-called military-industrial complex, the draft, the police and the federal government are under attack daily.

This constant barrage of editorializing and incessant hammering at America's problems is subtly undermining faith in the country and the credibility of the government.

You can have just so much of this. I am all for constructive criticism, but some of the news media are so preoccupied with destructive self-analysis that it is becoming a matter of national morale. If it continues long enough it can destroy a basic faith in America. I think that is already evident in the disregard for all institutions and the apathetic live-just-for-today attitude of some of our young people. They are frustrated because they have seen only the negative side.

I am not saying that there are not many legitimate problems which should be exposed or that bad news should be suppressed just because it is bad. But I am worried that too often only a biased and distorted side of the picture is presented under the guise of so-called objective news reporting.

I should emphasize here that this is not true for a great many responsible newspapers and radio and TV stations across the country and I am not talking about those. In this area Texas news media have done a good job. But I am talking about such papers as The New York Times and The Washington Post and the major TV networks which reach millions daily.

When the Founding Fathers adopted the First Amendment to the Constitution in 1790 guaranteeing a free press, they could not have envisioned the massive and powerful communications system we have today. At that time there was a built-in check and balance on the power of the press through diverse ownership and free competition.

Because of the tremendous cost, the trend in recent decades has been toward monopoly. Single ownership in metropolitan areas is no longer an exception. Three TV networks control the airwaves. This means that a relatively few anonymous and faceless individuals control the information that reaches millions of Americans every day.

In an elected representative government such as ours, the news media are all-important. It is the main channel between the government and the people. It is the principal means by which the public is kept informed of what its elected officials are up to.

By focusing on some issues and ignoring others, the news media determine what people think and write their Congressman about. The selection of the news can itself be a form of discrimination. We tend to think about the problems of which we are constantly reminded.

The news media have tremendous political power. They can make or break a political candidate by the kind of exposure they give him and they can defeat him once he is in office by the way they report what he does. The media virtually control the information on which the public in an elective democracy must base its opinions and decisions.

With this great opinion making power, it is of the utmost importance that the news media exercise responsibility. By responsibility I mean that both sides of an issue should be presented. I cannot believe that is so difficult as some

V.F.W. support for the Veterans Administration's efforts on behalf of America's ex-servicemen was a highlight of Donald E. Johnson's speech to the V.F.W. National Convention Aug. 17 at the Statler Hilton Hotel in Dallas.

Johnson, VA Administrator, pointed out that the V.F.W. "has not always agreed with every policy and program or with every decision and activity of the Veterans Administration and it never will—or should.

"But the V.F.W. also has never failed to give its wholehearted, vigorous and effective support to the concept and the reality of an adequately funded, independent Veterans Administration, a VA with total responsibility and authority to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and orphan."

In addition, Johnson said V.F.W. members consistently have recognized the "dedication, compassion of the 170,000 men and women in the VA with whom I have been privileged to work."

Johnson called the Vietnam veterans "the now veterans, now making the V.F.W. a growing, stronger organization, now most in need of help and now most entitled to those benefits and services which constitute the practical expression of their nation's gratitude."

VA Stockholders' Report

No agency will take over VA tasks while he is its head, VA Administrator Donald E. Johnson (right) tells delegates.

Johnson said the 1972 VA budget of $11 billion is the highest in its history and three programs "are of paramount importance."

These, he explained, are the $6.2 billion in compensation and pension payments, the $2 billion in education and training benefits and the $2.3 billion in hospital and medical care for veterans.

Referring to his talk as a "stockholders' report," Johnson said "if our stockholders' report shows compensation and pension benefits as a delayed or deferred cost of wars past, then the GI Bill education and training program must be identified as one of the wisest, most profitable investments in the America of today and tomorrow that has ever been made."

A total of nearly 13 million World War II, Korean War and Vietnam era veterans have trained under it, he continued.

The country has benefited through the greater ability of educated and trained citizens to pay taxes, colleges and universities have profited and American businessmen have learned that on-the-job training "is good for business, good for the veteran and good for America," he said.

Vietnam veterans are taking advantage of the GI Bill's education and training benefits in record numbers, Johnson continued. His prediction that as many Vietnam veterans would have trained in less than five years as Korean veterans in 13 years "was too conservative."

Instead "this past April the present program exceeded the Korean total by nearly 100,000 and it is going to continue growing," Johnson asserted.

Since becoming administrator, Johnson said, he has cut the red tape "involved in getting admitted to our VA hospitals." Included in this step was an end to disclosure of income by veterans 65 or older and a notarized statement of inability to pay.

Johnson predicted that the 1971-72 fiscal year, for which $2.3 billion has been budgeted for VA medicine, will be marked by unmatched progress such as care for 843,000 veterans, nearly 8 million outpatient visits to hospitals and $69 million for VA medical and prosthetic research.

In addition, $93 million will be spent for hospital construction and 53,000 medical personnel will be trained in VA hospitals.

Senate Leader Praises Organization For Legislative, Patriotic Efforts

V.F.W. Does Its Homework

Commander-in-Chief H. R. Rainwater (right) welcomes Sen. Herman E. Talmadge to the podium. The Georgian is on the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee.

V.F.W. effectiveness in winning approval for legislation that benefits veterans and its patriotic posture were praised by Sen. Herman Talmadge (Ga.), ranking majority member of the newly-established Senate Veterans Affairs Committee.

"The V.F.W. has done its homework," Talmadge said. "It has been in the forefront in the efforts for veterans benefits."

Talmadge addressed the V.F.W. 72nd National Convention in Dallas on Aug. 19 at the Statler Hilton Hotel.

He said that the past year "has been an important one for veterans legislation because we have been able to make a great deal of progress."

"There was more legislation to benefit veterans in 1970 than at any time since the end of World War II."

Talmadge said "the V.F.W. is composed of people who represent the spirit of America, people who represent democracy and patriotism."

"The V.F.W. has never been afraid to stand up and be counted," he continued. "You never back away from a course you believe right and in the best interests of America. Your main concern in the past, present and future is Americanism and that's a cause worth championing."

Talmadge expressed the wish that attitudes such as those expressed by the V.F.W. were prevalent in the United States, which "needs champions and less draft card burners, flag desecrators and less whining and complaining."

"We need people who are ready and willing to stand up for America in good times and bad," he said. "We need a strong America and I stand with you every step of the way and I am sure you will marshal the support of all the nation's veterans."

Talmadge said the veterans population of the U.S. totals 28 million and with dependents accounts for half of all the people living in this country.

"I know of no harder working group of citizens in the United States," he continued. "The country owes all who served in the armed forces a debt that can never be repaid. The veterans are the strength and sinews of our nation. Because of these men our nation is strong and free today."

Reviewing some of the currently enacted legislation, Talmadge cited increased compensation for disabled veterans and the creation of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee ("which will keep up the momentum of legislation").

"I know as you are aware that we have had inadequate staffs and hospital rooms for veterans who need it now, not next year," he said. "I see that it has been taken care of and I believe the President will implement it—the adequate means for hospital care for wounded and maimed."

Talmadge called for greater respect for American servicemen from the public at large.

"The man who puts on a uniform has the right to respect," he said. "I have been fed up with the growing criticism of the Defense Department. The military has weakened its effectiveness because of the abuse, as if it were the lowest form of life."

"I am critical of senators who make speeches on the floor of the Senate that are repeated the next day on Radio Hanoi," and he pledged that nothing he would say could be incorporated into North Vietnam's propaganda machine.

Discussing the draft, Talmadge said "no one likes to have his life interrupted but every man should be proud to serve when called upon."

He added, however, that he

V.F.W. Parades For Dallas

Vietnam Veterans Seek Growth in V.F.W.

Three days of meetings by the V.F.W. Vietnam Veterans Caucus during the 72nd National Convention in Dallas explored suggestions for the recruitment of Vietnam veterans and retention of those now in the V.F.W.

During the discussions, Adjutant General Julian Dickenson reviewed the success the organization has had so far in attracting 450,000 Vietnam veterans.

Raymond J. McHugh, chief of the Copley News Service Bureau in Washington, who also spoke, attributed much of the public's failure to grasp the issues involved in Vietnam to ignorance of Southeast Asia.

"Most Americans have been well-schooled in the history of Europe and in recent years they are beginning to understand the Middle East, but Southeast Asia might as well be the other side of the moon," he said. "Perhaps before the Vietnam war not more than 10,000 Americans ever visited Indochina.

"Part of the problem lies in the fact, too, that this war is the first to be covered by the 'new breed' of journalist, the one well-educated in sociology unlike an earlier generation steeped in history, politics and geography."

McHugh added that the decision of several Administrations "to follow a policy of guns and butter put Vietnam in the background as a national concern."

Although McHugh said the "truth never hurt anyone," he suggested that "in certain phases of the Vietnam operation a case could be made for press censorship."

As for Vietnam veterans themselves, McHugh said "you are the victims of the nuclear age, a new era in which a nation dare not lose a war but at the same time dare not win it either."

Preston F. Garriss, Junior Vice

Commander of the North Carolina Department, was elected caucus chairman, and B. E. Roberts, of the Missouri Department, was chosen secretary.

A Medal of Honor winner from Hammond, La., Raymond M. Clausen, was named honorary secretary.

The approximately 50 delegates who attended the caucus sessions represented 17 Departments.

A statement adopted by the Vietnam veterans protested the depiction of men who have fought in Southeast Asia as "mass murderers and dopeheads."

"Realizing that the war in Vietnam is a very unpopular war, we believe our government has been right in its actions taken in the Vietnam situation," the statement said. "We feel the U.S. is the leader of the free world and if we want to remain free we must be prepared to help protect all free nations in the world from being taken over militarily by the Communists . . .

"For if we don't fight in other parts of the world we will surely have to fight on our own soil.

"We believe that our troops are fighting for our heritage and freedom in Vietnam as well as the freedom of the South Vietnamese people.

"We feel we speak for the Vietnam veterans because we have the most members in our ranks (the V.F.W.) who have actually fought in Vietnam. We do not in any way recognize the so very few veterans who claim to be speaking for us by demonstrating and making fools of us."

Throughout the meeting, the caucus participants emphasized that their goal was to "build a bigger and better V.F.W. organization."

On the final day of meetings Frank A. Runions, Missouri Department Commander; Stanley F. Kolniak, Louisiana Department Commander; Ernest S. Hubbard, North Carolina Department Commander, and Claude McCarthy, Washington Department Commander, were introduced. ■

Citadel of Patriotism

New Commander-in-Chief Firm Believer In V.F.W.

by Howard Silber

Joseph L. Vicites is an uncommonly successful salesman and like most men of similar accomplishment, the new Commander-in-Chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States credits his success not so much to his own ability as to his absolute belief and faith in the product he is selling.

Joe Vicites has been a powerful believer in the V.F.W. since May of 1946 when he was inducted into Post 47 in Uniontown, Pa. The Post's home is built on the site of the birthplace of Gen. George C. Marshall and three of the original walls are still standing.

During his 25 years as a member, he has devoted his spare time, his energies and his talents to building his Post and the entire V.F.W. into a bigger, stronger, better organization. And veterans who have been introduced to the organization by Joe have benefited commensurately.

"It isn't difficult," he declared. "Not when you have something to sell.

"There is no organization that offers so much as the V.F.W. I have sold it on its ability to help the veteran and on the potential of every member to make use of the organization to help his comrades.

"I have sold it on our record of service to the community, the state and the nation. I've sold it on the basis of the good we do with our National Home at Eaton Rapids, Mich.

"I've sold it on the comradeship that we enjoy in the V.F.W.—a comradeship that transcends the economic status or social position of members. Whether a man is a highly-paid professional or whether he works with his hands, it is all the same in the V.F.W. We are equal and there is no consciousness of anything except equality. That's a powerful selling point to anyone who really believes in this country.

"And I've sold the V.F.W. on its status as a very select organization which has a membership limited to men who are fortunate enough to have been of extraordinary service to the United States.

"Our eligibility requirements are firm and unyielding. Congress made them that way in our charter. If you do not qualify, there is no way for you to become a member—not with money, not with power, not with influence. You must have the credentials of a campaign ribbon or medal.

"Money, power and influence can buy many things—most things in this world. But they won't buy a membership into the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. Our organization stands alone."

And Joe Vicites leaves his chair and stands tall as he talks about the V.F.W. His face softens and his dark eyes reflect his sincerity.

"We live in the greatest country in the world," he said. "It isn't a perfect country and there is room for it to be even greater. No organization is more active and more effective than the V.F.W. in striving to make the United States greater and more perfect.

"That's why I sell the V.F.W. I sell the V.F.W. because, through it, I sell my country."

Joe Vicites was born 47 years ago in Uniontown, Pa. The death of his Spanish-born father, while Joe and his sister were tots, left his mother, who was of Italian-American descent, to bring up the two fatherless children.

"She struggled for us," said the Commander-in-Chief. "She was a cook for restaurants. She'd leave the house at six in the morning and often not return until seven or eight at night.

"I used to tell her, 'Mom, it's not

In Remembrance

Delegates to the 72nd V.F.W. National Convention in Dallas, Texas, paused Sunday, Aug. 15, to honor the memory of those who died defending the freedom of America.

Over 4,000 V.F.W. members attended the tribute at which the Most Rev. William J. Moran (Brig. Gen. Ret.), auxiliary bishop in the Army military ordinariate, spoke.

"For love of country and their fellowman, they accepted death, and thus resolved all doubts, and made immortal their patriotism and love," he said.

"These men died that we might have freedom and peace," he continued. "To make that desire come true... to be faithful to their hopes, is a task that is up to us and to our nation."

Bishop Moran explained that, "Perhaps we have accepted the freedom of choice won for us by our forefathers and by the men we honor tonight and are using it to choose the wrong things... The freedom, we now claim, has come to mean freedom from all unpleasantness—from hardship, from discipline, from the stern voice of duty, from the pain of self-sacrifice...

"We have clamored for total freedom, and we have just about got it, and now we are facing a bleak and chilling truth: We have flung off one external restraint and another, including restraint of ourselves..."

"It is a distorted concept of freedom which leaves men free to be selfish, free to be lazy, free to be weak, free to be ignoble. This is not the freedom which the men we honor tonight won for us and in history preserved for us, and if we are to really remember them... our first and fundamental choice must be not to abuse that freedom."

"If we do not abuse freedom then surely and unalterably we shall be on the road to peace, a peace which was also the objective of our fallen comrades when they died to preserve freedom."

Special music was played prior to the program by organist Mrs. Lionel Schulz, of Trinity Lutheran Church, Dallas, and the band from V.F.W. Post 701, Lansing, Mich.

During the Memorial Service, the Naval Air Training Command Choir from Pensacola, Fla., sang the National Anthem, "Nearer, My God, To Thee," "Sleep, Soldier Boy," "Peace of God" and "Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Featured on stage was a symbolic military grave, replete with crosses and the Star of David. It represented all who died in the service of America.

V.F.W. Commander-in-Chief H. R. Rainwater, National Auxiliary President Mrs. Mary Cottone and other V.F.W. National officers laid wreaths and flowers on the grave during the service.

Nixon Praises

Dear Commander Rainwater:

The opportunity to come to Dallas for the Veterans of Foreign Wars Convention on August 19 was a most welcome one. It was a pleasure to be with you on that occasion, and I wanted to get this note off to thank you once again for your generous introduction and gracious hospitality during our visit.

As I said in Dallas, I have valued your expressions of confidence, both in private and publicly, during these past months and I shall continue to enlist your views, together with those of your distinguished colleagues on these matters which so vitally affect our national interest.

With warm regards and best wishes,

Sincerely,

standing of the principles which guided him in his quest for peace, security and justice in the world.

Between those principles of the Eisenhower years and the principles President Nixon is following in foreign policy today, there is marked continuity. President Nixon bases his foreign policy on the three pillars of partnership, strength and willingness to negotiate. I think it clear that these sum up the principles which guided President Eisenhower.

The goals we pursue and the principles which guide us are unchanged, but the contest in which the principles are applied is not the same. The world of the 1970's is far different from the world of the 1950's and the 1960's. And the changes in the world require new policies for the 1970's.

In his last State of the Union Message in 1961, President Eisenhower recognized that changed circumstances in the future would dictate changes of policy. "New tactics," he said, "will have to be developed . . . to meet new situations, but the underlying principles should be constant." For this reason, President Nixon has been adopting new means to achieve goals we have long been pursuing—means which are more appropriate in today's circumstances.

In our relations with our allies, for example, the President has changed policy to encourage greater self-reliance on the part of nations which formerly depended on us, entirely or in major part, for their defense.

Nations which in the past have been junior partners in our alliances are becoming full-fledged partners. This policy change means a new division of labor between us and our allies. It does not imply that our goal of deterring aggression has been abandoned or modified or has become less important now than it was when we stood almost alone as the defender of many parts of the world.

In our relations with adversary

nations, we are moving more and more from confrontation to negotiation. In the long view of history, this transition in the dominant method of dealing with conflict may well be the most notable change in the field of international relations in our lifetime. It does not, however, imply a change in our foreign policy goals.

This development has an important element of continuity with the Eisenhower years. Despite serious confrontation and persistent turbulence in the international atmosphere, President Eisenhower constantly sought to negotiate. Many of the Eisenhower initiatives bore no immediate fruit. Some, like his proposal to curb nuclear testing, came to fruition after he left office. Others, seeking arms limitation and the removal of the Iron Curtain across Europe, were met with flat rejection.

Yet, much was gained by this process of constant probing to determine how far it was possible to go to reduce tension and resolve conflict by negotiation. It was Ike who concluded the treaty that brought about the removal of Soviet forces from Austria and assured the independence and freedom of that part of central Europe. It was Ike who concluded the treaty to guarantee the peaceful use of Antarctica. It was Ike who made the Atoms for Peace proposal that resulted in the creation of the International Atomic Energy Agency that turned the world toward the development of this new source of energy to enrich human life rather than to destroy it.

It was Dwight Eisenhower who initiated continuing negotiations with mainland China seventeen years ago through talks between diplomats of the two nations in Geneva and later in Warsaw. These talks exemplified the eagerness of the Eisenhower Administration to settle differences by negotiation and to open up nations which locked their doors and kept their shutters drawn against the outside world.

Today we are well into an era of negotiation. At no other time in history have we been engaged in so many negotiations in so many places about so many problems. And this has happened because the Nixon Administration has launched a vigorous quest for agreement on a great range of issues that threaten peace and security.

Because we have negotiated patiently and skillfully, the guns have been silent in the Middle East for the past year. Because we have negotiated patiently and skillfully, there is a treaty before the Senate to prevent the establishment of arsenals in the world's seabeds. There is promise of agreement between our country and the Soviet Union to establish limits on both offensive and defensive strategic weapons. We continue to seek an agreement that will increase the security of Berlin. We are preparing, along with our NATO partners, to discuss mutual and balanced reduction of military forces in Europe. We have not given up the effort to end the Vietnam war by agreement in Paris, as the designation of Ambassador Porter as the new chief negotiator for those talks indicates. And, our President will go to Peking, consistent with his long-standing objective of seeking peace and security in Asia.

This list includes some bold initiatives. They are being taken by a President who is thoroughly familiar with the lessons of history, who has carefully plumbed the depths of every pitfall that lies along the course he is pursuing, and who is determined to leave nothing undone that may speed the coming of a generation of peace.

He will not repeat the mistakes that have sometimes flawed our negotiations in the past. He will not rush into negotiation without adequate preparation. He will not be deluded by words that paper over disagreement on substance. He will not make premature or unilateral concessions. He will not conclude agreements that weaken our security. He will not bargain away the right of any other people. He will not abandon any friend.

We negotiate in order to increase the chances that our nation and the world will know more peace, more security, more justice than in the past. Any agreements that we conclude must move us toward these goals. There will be no agreements that contravene these purposes.

To succeed in negotiation, we must be strong.

Strength is an inducement to negotiation. It makes resort to force too costly a method of resolving disputes and thereby narrows the range of alternatives to negotiation.

Strength enables a nation to achieve equity through the process of negotiation. A strong nation is not in the position of a suppliant at the bargaining table.

When the subject of negotiation is limitation of military power, we must recognize that it is foolhardy, in advance of agreement, to reduce needed strength or abandon plans for maintaining it. If we disarm unilaterally, we weaken our bargaining power. If we disarm unilaterally, an adversary nation may well conclude that negotiating with us on the subject of arms limitation is unnecessary.

Let there be no misunderstanding about this point. The negotiations that go on today occur because our country, in partnership with our friends, is strong. Any undermining of our strength would diminish the prospects for negotiating tolerable solutions to the critical problems of the world.

As long as the strength we need is maintained, we can enter into negotiation without fear and with reasonable hope of an outcome that will take us closer to genuine peace.

If we fail to remain strong in the years ahead, our failure can have tragic consequences.

Maintaining our strength—moral, economic, and military—is a job which no President, no Secretary of Defense, no other Cabinet officer can do without wholehearted support from Congress and the people. That support needs vigorous reaffirmation today, particularly to combat the persistent pressures toward erosion of our military power.

There are some in public life who constantly attack the military profession and seek ever more drastic reductions in our forces and their capabilities, and I worry about them. But I worry more about those who appear to be indifferent and unconcerned about the maintenance of the nation's strength.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars has always helped to keep the nation strong. That help is needed now, for there has been no time in our recent history when our opportunity to achieve durable peace has been more promising if we remain strong and no time when the risks of weakness have been more serious.

In this era of negotiation—fraught with opportunity and risk—I look to you to help keep the nation on a course that offers our best hope of achieving for mankind peace, security and justice. ■ mean people who are ready and willing to speak out for the American way of life, in good times and bad, and to defend it against its enemies whether they be foreign or domestic." (See page 31 for details.)

McKeithen said protestors should go elsewhere with their complaints if they find life in the United States so unbearable. "People who complain about America should try it some place else... There's no dissent in Cuba, North Vietnam or China. They've all been murdered. There's none in Russia. They're all in Siberia... Anyone who walks in a parade with the flag of the enemy or burns his draft card ought to be sent to that great haven of rest, East Berlin, and in a few months he will be begging to come back and we'll probably let him."

In accepting his award from Rainwater, Coray said of the USO "I don't know of any other country in the world that has this type of organization or has the concern for the morale and well being of troops on active duty that the United States does." He cited the V.F.W. and several professional entertainment groups for praise for their cooperation with the USO.

In the afternoon some 10,000 delegates, their wives and families gathered at the Arena to hear President Nixon set forth the "quest for peace as the challenge of the 70s."

On his economic reforms, Nixon asked that the nation's veterans be willing to forego raises or dividends for awhile since this benefits the nation as a whole. (See page 12 for details.)

Friday, Aug. 20

The final day of the Convention was taken up with elections of officers for the 1971-72 membership year.

Elected Commander-in-Chief was Joseph L. Vicites, of Uniontown, Pa., chosen Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief at the 71st National Convention in Miami Beach, Fla., and Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief at the 70th National Convention in Philadelphia, Pa. He succeeds H. R. Rainwater.

As Vicites' successor in the office of Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief the delegates elected Patrick E. Carr, of Metairie, La., who was elected as Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief at the 71st National Convention in Miami Beach.

Ray R. Soden, of Oak Park, Ill., was elected Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief.

Re-elected Quartermaster General was J. A. Cheatham.

Other officers elected were John Stang, of LaCrosse, Kans., Judge Advocate General; Dr. Robert J. Meehan, of Rockland, Me., Surgeon General, and the Rev. Charles H. Carpenter, of Shawboro, N.C., National Chaplain.

Drugs, Unemployment Problems Studied

DRUG usage among servicemen and the problem of finding jobs for returning veterans were thoroughly examined by V.F.W. Service Officers who attended the annual two-day National Conference which preceded the 1971 V.F.W. National Convention in Dallas, Texas.

Held Aug. 13-14, they heard experts discuss what the government is doing concerning the drug abuse problem and unemployment among veterans. In addition, they received vital information about new rules and regulations concerning veterans benefits.

Harry McKnight of the Veterans Administration's Alcohol and Drug Dependence Service outlined the magnitude of the drug problem and the plans the VA has for combatting it.

Drug usage is a serious problem not only for the military but for the entire American society, he told the group.

McKnight said the VA has experienced a 20-fold increase in the number of veterans being treated for drug usage since 1968.

He reported that the problem will continue to grow. "We really don't know or have any hard figures on the number of drug users in the military or among civilians today."

However, he said that estimates run between 125,000 to 260,000 among the American population and that between 5 to 5½% of the servicemen in Vietnam are drug users.

"This means that if 30,000 servicemen are being returned each month from Vietnam, 1,500 have a drug problem," McKnight said.

"The VA realizes it is faced with a serious problem," he continued. "Last October we opened our first drug treatment center and have since started four more. By this October the VA will have put into operation 32 such centers that will be scattered throughout the United States."

McKnight also reported that centers which had been contemplated for opening during the 1973 budget year had been moved up in order to handle the rapidly increasing number of drug treatment cases.

The military is cooperating with the VA in the treatment program, McKnight said. Servicemen detected in Vietnam as having a drug problem are being "detoxified" there, then flown to military hospitals in the U.S. and referred to the nearest VA drug treatment center.

U.S. Civil Service Commissioner L. J. Andolsek also addressed the group and discussed unemployment among returning Vietnam veterans.

"One of the roadblocks in the way of Vietnam veterans finding jobs is connected with an unfortunate amount of bad publicity, he said. "More than one Vietnam vet has reported that employers seemed to shy away from him because they had read and heard so much about drug addiction among veterans. They figure any veteran coming out of service may be an addict."

Andolsek pointed out that of the over 5 million Vietnam-era veterans back in civilian life, less than 1% are drug users.

"While I grant you that any percentage is too much," he said, "that figure of less than one out of a hundred helps to put the whole picture in perspective. There is no justification for any feeling by employers that they have to be extra careful, or they may be taking a chance, when they employ Vietnam veterans."

Andolsek predicted that "this attitude will die out and disappear when more employers have experience with hiring returning veterans and find they can really do a job."

ED SALE, Studio 381-C, Avon By the Sea, N.J. 07717

He noted that "in a generation that sometimes seems to have forgotten the virtues of hard work, the veteran is often the exception. He knows he has to make up time and he is willing to work hard to do it."

Andolsek called upon the V.F.W. to help solve the unemployment problem. "Every member of your organization can help to break down and overcome this prejudice by making himself an active missionary on behalf of Vietnam veterans," he said. "Let it be known that these returning veterans are men—matured beyond their years, serious and anxious to further their own careers by making a success of civilian life."

The two-day session was moderated by Norman Jones, V.F.W. National Veterans Service Director.

Among the many experts to speak were several VA officials who outlined the medical and health programs of the VA. They were: Dr. John D. Chase, Associate Chief Medical Director, Dr. Paul A. L. Haber, Assistant Chief Medical Director; A. W. Farmer, Executive Director for Administration, and Marjorie R. Quandt, Director, Medical Administrative Service. Veterans benefits were discussed by J. C. Peckarsky, Deputy Chief Benefits Director; John G. Miller, Contact and Administrative Service Director and John M. Dervan, Loan Guaranty Service Director.

Veterans legislation was discussed by Francis W. Stover, Director, V.F.W. National Legislative Service.

important.' But she worked hard anyway. No one could ask for any more than she set before us. Not only in tangible things, either.

"She was very religious and she taught us religion. And she disciplined us properly. When she couldn't handle me, she would send for one of my uncles. That took care of me.

"When I was in the Army I had dependency allowances sent home. I knew that she needed the money. She still had my teenage sister to care for.

"But, after I returned home in early 1946, she went to a drawer and took out an envelope. That envelope contained every penny she had been sent. She hadn't spent anything—that's the kind of Mom I had.

"Here, it belongs to you,' she told me.

"Mom was proud of me when I joined the V.F.W. When I was elected Post Commander in 1951, she thought that was just about the greatest thing. And it was—for me and for Mom.

"But there was sadness then, too. She died that year. My first year as Post Commander. I wish she could have been present to see me become Commander-in-Chief. She knew my feelings about the V.F.W."

Vicites remembers his boyhood as being happy and active. He played basketball and was a member of the track and cross-country teams at Uniontown Joint Senior High School.

In March of 1943 he entered the Army. After training in the United States, he became a member of the 559th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Automatic Weapons Battalion, which was attached to the 84th Infantry Division—the "Railsplitters."

Vicites and his unit landed in Normandy at the time of the breakout from St. Lo. The men of the 559th fought with the Third, Seventh and Ninth Armies, taking part in the Battle of the Bulge and crossing the Ruhr and Rhine Rivers. Although he was a wire communications section leader, the future V.F.W. leader found himself using a rifle as an infantryman on many occasions during the advance into and across West Germany to the Elbe River.

The battalion stayed on in Germany and Belgium after V-E Day and Vicites finally returned to the United States in January, 1946.

Vicites said he joined the V.F.W. because "I was impressed by its youth activities and sports programs."

Soon he became active in those programs—as chairman of the Youth and Athletic Committees. He was chairman of the Teener Baseball Committee in 1959 when the Uniontown Post team won the national championship.

Vicites also became deeply involved in the veterans service and community service activities of the Post. He was elected Junior Vice-Commander in 1949, an event which was followed by a steady progression to the highest office in the V.F.W.

V.F.W. work also led the new Commander-in-Chief to his wife, Dolores. They met at a Polio Fund benefit dance sponsored by the Post. Dolores, a Uniontown dancing teacher, was an entertainer in the show put on with the dance.

Joe and Dolores have two youngsters. Debbie, who will be 19 in December, is a sophomore at West Virginia University. Vincent, 11, is a sixth grader in Uniontown.

In 1967, Joe left his position as a salesman to enter public life as the Clerk of Courts in Fayette County, Pa.

In addition to the V.F.W., he has been active in many areas of community life in Uniontown and throughout southwestern Pennsylvania. He was Young Man of the Year of the Chamber of Commerce and he headed a fund drive to support programs for retarded children. He also has helped in the leadership of the March of Dimes, American Cancer Society, Heart Fund and USO drives in his city of 15,000.

In the V.F.W., Joe progressed to the position of Commander of the Department of Pennsylvania in 1965. The following year he entered the national scene as vice chairman of the 1966-67 Loyalty Day Committee. He served on the National Council of Administration from 1967 to 1969 and, at the same time, was a member of the National Budget and Finance Committee.

In August, 1969, Vicites was elected Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief. He became Senior Vice

V.F.W. MAGAZINE

Commander-in-Chief at the 71st National Convention at Miami Beach, Fla., in 1970.

At the 72nd National Convention at Dallas, Texas, in August, Vicites was elected Commander-in-Chief.

Joe Vicites is determined that he is going to continue to sell the V.F.W.

"We have the greatest potential of any organization in the United States," he said. "We are going to continue to grow—just as long as we continue to stand up and speak out, just as long as our Posts remain citadels of patriotism in America."

The veteran of the Vietnam conflict is going to represent an important part of Joe's program.

"The V.F.W. is the organization for the Vietnam veteran. We are working hard to help him—to find him a job if he is unemployed; to find him a better job as soon as he is qualified.

"We will help him if he has a dope problem. We will assist him in every way we can.

"We want him to join and, more important, to become involved in the V.F.W. We want to make use of his fresh ideas and his enormous energy. And we will all gain from the association.

"We have more to offer the Vietnam veteran and we are going to extend that offer in person, just as often as we can."

Vicites said he plans to spend most of his term traveling throughout the United States.

"If I'm invited, I hope to visit every one of our Departments at least once. And I want to be where I'm needed when I'm needed, at the state capitals and at the nation's capital.

"This is going to be the greatest year of my life. There is no prouder feeling than when I wear the Cross of Malta. This year, I shall wear the Cross of Malta in every section, every corner of my country."

HOW TED VERNON AVERAGES $20,000 WORKING 6 MONTHS A YEAR

When Ted Vernon* walked to a mailbox that day, the things he wanted seemed far beyond his reach. Like big money, independence and security, a new future.

Chances looked dim. Ted had no college. His only experience was his old dead-end job. And he was past 40. Yet, when Ted mailed his envelope, everything he dreamed of became possible. All he did was mail a coupon like the one you have below.

Free Book helped Ted to big income

It brought Ted a fascinating free book about the big-pay opportunities in the booming Accident Investigation field. It was all new to Ted. Yet, it was his perfect opportunity. His first full year, he made $14,768.72. Since then, he's averaged $20,000 working about six months a year. The rest of the time he just takes it easy.

He learned secrets of success in 30 minutes

Ted skimmed through Universal's free book in 30 minutes. He learned that Accident Investigation is a $19 billion dollar industry safe from lay-off, recessions and automation—that more men are urgently needed to investigate 22 million accidents each year — and also that Universal School's training-by-mail has been for over 20 years the path of quick success for thousands of men in this high-pay field.

Ted enrolled for Universal's correspondence training at the mere cost of cigarette money. It was easy. Ted simply studied his brief, interesting lessons at home in his spare time. He kept right on earning in his old job until he was ready. As a busy specialist in storm loss adjusting, his income is unusually high and not typical of the industry, but it does show the big potential in this great field, even for men with no college or experience.

Goals

I say to you, my comrades: If this great nation can finance the governmental luxuries of half the nations of the world, subsidize private industry and individuals, we can and should generously assist those who fight and die to save it.

We shall insist upon every governmental agency honoring veterans preference in employment. It is the legal duty of the U.S. Civil Service Commission to enforce veterans preference in Civil Service, and to halt the practice of federal agencies using devious methods to avoid compliance with those laws. I shall personally ask the President of the United States to once again exert his own personal leadership to expand the Public Service Job program in order that more veterans may obtain employment.

We shall contact the offices of public employment service on every level of our organization, and insist that they do everything within the law to give veteran job applicants preference in job referrals.

One of the most disturbing developments in recent years has been the cut of 7,000 in the daily patient load of the VA hospital system which was ordered by the Office of Management and Budget last January.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars, under the leadership of then Commander-in-Chief Rainwater, vigorously opposed this threat. As a result, the Congress added sufficient funds to keep the patient load at its previous level of 86,000. But by the first of July, the VA hospital system had been cut below 79,000 patients as a result of the Budget Office action. We shall demand that the patient load be increased to its previous level, or even higher if necessary, to meet the demands for treatment.

We shall also call for an expansion of the drug treatment program; utilization of clinically accepted new surgical procedures; and the installation and expansion of all new medical programs in a sufficient number of hospitals to insure their availability to veterans wherever they may reside.

We shall remain constantly alert for any sign of further attacks on the VA hospital system and oppose them wherever found.

A veteran's military service and character of his discharge are the only criteria which should be considered when a non-service connected illness impels him to seek outpatient care. As we approach the era of universal health care for the general public, Congress should remove all other requirements for the treatment of veterans by the Veterans Administration in any program.

In recent years funds to construct additional new and replacement hospitals have been drastically reduced. The 15-year program for modernization of existing facilities which was adopted after the 1958 V.F.W. investigation has never been properly financed. Physical decay continues to take its shocking toll. Much needed air conditioning has been repeatedly delayed.

We shall pursue our goal for complete modernization of veterans hospitals with renewed vigor. Sufficient funds to carry out this program and to expedite the construction of new facilities is of paramount importance to the veterans of America. And time is of the essence.

In the past we have been faced by a number of attempts to dismember the Veterans Administration, and to transfer veterans programs to other federal agencies. The Department of HEW would love to grab the VA Loan program. Social Security stands ready to swallow up the VA Compensation and Pension programs.

We shall continue to insist that the Veterans Administration be maintained intact—as the one organization with sole responsibility for the administration of veterans programs.

Add to these goals an increase in the pay rates for active military service and an equitable adjustment of military retirement pensions consistent with active military pay, and you have at least a partial list of the many-pronged campaign which lies ahead of us.

I urge you now to join with me in making these our primary interests and objectives during my tenure as Commander-in-Chief. Certainly we can do no less for the men and women who fight this nation's wars. ■

Stockholders'

On the staffing ratio he said:

"I can report to you today that in the last six weeks of fiscal 1971 the VA hired more than 8,600 hospital and medical care employees, including more than 800 very scarce category physicians, more than 50 dentists and nearly 1,900 nurses.

"With these additional, valued employees and with our record high fiscal 1972 budget, we will achieve the desired one to one staffing ratio in our psychiatric hospitals and near our goal of two to one staffing ratios in our hospitals."

Johnson pledged that further improvements will be made in the VA hospital system.

On the Vietnam veterans' employment problems, Johnson said the efforts of the V.F.W., the VA and other members of the Jobs for Veterans Committee "are beginning to pay off."

He cited Department of Labor statistics showing the number of jobless Vietnam veterans had fallen to 309,000 in the second quarter of 1971, as compared with 372,000 in the first quarter.

"And this number should drop as the Emergency Employment Act, which is funded for $1 billion and which provides that special consideration for public service jobs be given veterans who served in Indochina or Korea on or after Aug. 5, 1964, takes hold."

While the VA has shared responsibilities with other governmental agencies in some areas which include veterans, such as drug addiction, Johnson said that as long as he is VA administrator these "shared responsibilities" will never be "the prelude to the dissolution" of the VA.

Johnson attacked critics of American troops in Vietnam who assert that Vietnam veterans are "confirmed, trained killers" who have become narcotic addicts through boredom.

"They are not talking about nameless, faceless strangers," he said. "They are talking about your son and mine and about thousands of your fellow V.F.W. members.

"As far as I am concerned no one no matter how uninformed, how misled or how fearful he may be is going to be allowed to get away with this kind of character assassination.

"The immediate practical result of eradicating the untrue and unfair stigma that surrounds our Vietnam veterans will be to enhance their chances of finding jobs. And let's face it, hopheads, whether for real or just in an employer's mind, are not very much in demand as employees.

"The greater victory, of course, will be to win back for these courageous American patriots their good name and to give them the pride and prestige and satisfaction that the title 'veteran' has given us."

Biographies Of New Senior and Junior Commanders-in-Chief

A FORMER prisoner of war who spent nine months in a Nazi prison camp, Patrick E. Carr, a Metairie, La., attorney, is the V.F.W.'s newly elected Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief.

He was chosen for that post at the 72nd National Convention held in Dallas, Texas, from Aug. 13 to 20. He had been elected Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief at the 71st National Convention in Miami Beach, Fla.

After enlisting in the service in June, 1942, Carr flew as a B-24 gunner until his plane was shot down Aug. 9, 1944, on a raid over Budapest on his 40th mission with the 464th Bomb Group of the 778th Bomb Squadron based in Italy.

Until his release April 26, 1945, Carr was a prisoner of war in Stalag Luft IV. He holds the ETO ribbon with several battle stars, the Air Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Purple Heart and shares in a Presidential Unit Citation.

A native of Paulding, Miss., Carr spent most of his life in the New Orleans area. He makes his home with his wife and seven children in Metairie. He is a graduate of Loyola University of the South, from which he earned his law degree and is a partner in the firm of Carr and Kollin.

A charter member of Post 6640 in Metairie, he has served as Inspector General and Judge Advocate General of the national organization, three times as Louisiana Department Judge Advocate, Department Junior Vice Commander in 1957 and Commander in 1959. Several times he has been a member of the National Security and Foreign Affairs Committee. In 1967 he was President of the Convention Corporation for the 68th National Convention in New Orleans.

A VETERAN of World War II, naval combat in the Atlantic and the Pacific, Ray R. Soden, of Bensenville, Ill., is the V.F.W.'s new Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief. He was elected at the 72nd National Convention in Dallas.

Patrick E. Carr (L) was named Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief and Ray R. Soden was elected the new Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief at the 72nd V.F.W. National Convention. (E-4)

During World War II, Soden served on the USS Claxton, a destroyer that was part of the Little Beaver Squadron commanded by Adm. Arleigh A. Burke. He holds the ETO and Pacific theater ribbons with seven battle stars.

Soden was appointed chairman of the Illinois Veterans' Commission by Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie.

He has served as Commander of Post 2149, his Bensenville home Post, Commander of Illinois' Fifth District and in 1964-65 he was Illinois Department Commander. Prior to that he was Junior Vice Commander in 1962 and Senior Vice Commander in 1963 of the Department. He has been Chairman of the National Voice of Democracy Committee for three years and one as Vice Chairman. In 1965 he was President of the 66th National Convention Corporation for the 66th National Convention in Chicago.

Soden is a public relations representative for the Illinois Bell Telephone Co., a past member of the DuPage County Boy Scouts Council, secretary of the Oak Park Lions Club, past president of the Bensenville Community Chest, a member of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, Illinois Committee for Higher Education, Franklin Park Chamber of Commerce and several other civic organizations, including the Polish Legion of American Veterans, Telephone Pioneers of America (3rd vice president), Illinois State Press Association and Military Order of the Cootie. In 1961 he was awarded the Freedoms Foundation Americanism Medal.

He and Mrs. Soden have three children and three grandchildren.

Homework

doubts that many young men would be attracted to a military career in the face of the denigration of the armed forces.

"The morale and respect for the serviceman is lower now than at any other time," he continued. "We have to have a new respect. Discipline as we used to know it has become a farce.

"I don't know when it will be restored but we will be a stronger and safer nation when it is. And a good place to start would be in the United States Congress.

"People are fed up with the Vietnam war—we got into it and wouldn't fight. We drew the pistol and wouldn't use it. I hope the U.S. has learned a lesson from Vietnam—stop acting like the banker and Santa Claus for the whole world. If we get into another war, let's go into it to win and never let our servicemen be pushed around by a fourth rate power. The Vietnam War has been a curse on this country.

"Senators filibuster against military legislation. I say let's reorder our priorities (to support the military) because if we don't all other priorities are meaningless.

"We can't ignore the lessons of history. Peace results from strength. War results from weakness. The quality of national defense has never been debatable and cannot be debated now.

"Russia and China have a third of the world's population, larger armies than ours. I have no objection to the President going to China—I'm for anything that can ease tension, alleviate the threat of war and extricate us from Vietnam. But I am not convinced that because the Chinese let a ping pong team in they are going to change their posture."

Talmadge added that in the face of the Soviets' "awesome military power any unilateral disarmament would be ludicrous in the extreme."

Referring again to the V.F.W., Talmadge concluded:

"I am glad to know there are Americans in great numbers who do more than pay lip service to the American way of life."

Heroes

come cheap. The men of the American forces in Vietnam have fought valiantly and successfully for the freedom of 18 million people half-way around the globe from Dallas. They have helped defend 200 million people of the free nations of Southeast Asia. American involvement in the Vietnam war is being ended in such a way that we can win a just peace for all the people of this region.

The task ahead is formidable. The men and women of the United States forces will continue to do a job of which all citizens can well be proud.

In World War II the mood of the country reflected the knowledge that the Republic was beset by trials as grave as any it had faced in its history. There was an unquestioned acceptance of the need to sacrifice to insure the survival of an ideal. We felt intuitively that our society offered man his best hope of a way of life by which he could fulfill himself in freedom.

Over the decades since then, however, the issues have been many and complex, and the rightness of our actions on the world scene has not been so easily demonstrated as in World War II. There is some disenchantment with the military today among certain groups, giving rise in turn to criticism not notable for its amiability. In point of fact, even a superficial look at recent history gives us reason to be proud of what our defense forces have accomplished over these years.

It is easily forgotten that United States strength and commitment were indispensable elements of the economical and political resurgence of Western Europe. The United States has responded to a series of challenges to freedom in the Far East, and the fact that freedom survives under the shadow of aggressive Communism is testimony to the effectiveness and perseverance of our armed forces.

Despite the determination of world powers to extend by force a political system which scorns freedom, the free world alliance remains a symbol of hope to nations where freedom has died.

Make no mistake about it. We are not the aggressor in South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia. Abandonment of our national objectives in Southeast Asia would be contrary to the principles for which our men fought.

The men who have been captured are still fighters for freedom. Their spirit, pride and service to country are the foundation of our democracy and the fulfillment of America's promise of freedom for mankind. We owe them a debt that can only be paid with reasonable self-interest policies in Southeast Asia.

Special recognition must go to the wives, children, and parents who bear the hardships of separation and anxiety. All are a credit to the unequaled and great traditions of our nation.

Let there be no doubt of the capacity and willingness of our people to serve their country. There are more than 2.5 million Americans serving today in the U.S. armed forces. There are nearly 28 million living American veterans. To put it another way, one in five adult Americans 18 years and older has worn the uniform of our nation's armed forces.

The rights enjoyed by all Americans are a legacy secured by these men and women. And in the forefront are members of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, other distinguished veterans organizations, the armed forces of our nation and especially the men and women who have given their lives or personal freedom for their fellow men. History will record the same honor and praise for today's servicemen and women that has been accorded in the past.

It is with great emotion that I gratefully accept, on behalf of the Department of Defense, the V.F.W. 1971 Armed Forces Award presented in absentia to the prisoners of war and those missing in action.

This significant medal and citation will be placed in the office of the Secretary of Defense where it will remain until our men are safely home. It will then be placed in the Pentagon Hall of Heroes.

The patriotic support of your organization on the Prisoners of War and Missing in Action issue has, and will continue to do much to focus attention on this problem which concerns all of our people. Let us honor these men now as heroes—and continue to press and pray for their safe and prompt return.

would like to think.

I am afraid that some people in the news business—a group which has been called an intellectual elite from Ivy League schools—are waging a kind of ideological warfare and are trying to sell their own ideas of what is good for the country under the guise of objective news reporting.

The role of the news media is not to express political opinions masquerading as news coverage. If these people want to express their own ideas, to which they have a perfect right, they should come out of the woodwork where they can be seen and run for political office. There are checks and balances within the political system from which the news media are immune and that is why individual opinion makers have no right to use the public airwaves as a platform for their own ideas.

Freedom of the press belongs to everyone and the American people have a right to balanced news reporting. You no longer have a free press when only one side of the coin is reported and when a handful of anonymous men can decide which side of the coin it will be.

I do not want to be an alarmist but I would like to talk for a minute about some of the facts that get lost in the constant carping about what is wrong with the system. Nothing is wrong with our system except a few people in it.

In a democracy, national defense suffers when there is inadequate public understanding and support. A little publicized Blue Ribbon Defense Panel appointed by the President in 1969 concluded that the convergence of a number of trends indicates a significant shifting of the strategic military balance against the United States and in favor of the Soviet Union.

These trends include the growing Soviet superiority in inter-continental ballistic missiles, the Soviet commitment of greater resources to offensive and defensive weapons, the possibility that our technological superiority will be lost to the Russians, the rapidly expanding Soviet naval capability, the convincing evidence that they are seeking a first-strike capability and the mounting hostility of segments of the public toward the military and defense establishment without due recognition that sustained irresponsible criticism could weaken and undermine the only forces which provide security for this great country of ours.

Adm. Elmo Zumwalt, chief of naval operations, recently testified before the Committee on Armed Services, "Expanding Soviet sea-power represents a new dimension in world affairs. When considered in conjunction with the recent attainment of nuclear parity by the

Out of the thousands who read this message perhaps only you and a few others will have the vision and the intuition to realize that it may be intended that you read this page at this time—that the coincidence of holding this magazine in your hands may shape your destiny, may guide you to lots of independence beyond the dreams of avarice.

Don't misunderstand me, I am not speaking of mysterious laws of nature that will sweep you to success without effort on your part. That sort of talk is rubbish. If this message is intended for you, you are the kind of man who knows that anything worthwhile must be earned. If the earlier development of your karma has revealed to you that there is no reward without effort, you may now be ready to learn and use the secret I have to impart.

Please don't misunderstand this statement. I am not a philanthropist. Frankly, I am going to charge you something for the secret I give you. Not a lot—but enough to convince me that you are a little above the fellows who merely "wish" for success.

I have two businesses that now pay me all the money I need.

I'd like to give this to my fellow men . . . while I am still able to help!

I was young once, as you may be—today I am older. Not too old to enjoy the fruits of my work, but older in the sense of being wiser. And once I was poor, desperately poor. Today almost any man can stretch his income to make ends meet. Today, there are few who hunger for bread and shelter. But in my youth I knew the pinch of poverty; the emptiness of hunger; the cold stare of the creditor who would not take excuses for money. Today, all that is past. And behind my city house, my summer home, my Cadillacs, my Winter-long vacations, my sense of independence—behind all the wealth of cash and deep inner satisfaction that I enjoy—there is one simple secret. It is this secret that I would like to impart to you. If you are satisfied with a humdrum life of service to another master, turn this page now—read no more. If you are interested in a fuller life, free from bosses, free from worries, free from fears, read further. This message may be meant for you.

by Victor B. Mason

One of them is unusual in two respects: 1) It is needed in every little community throughout this country; 2) It is a business that will never be invaded by the big fellows. It is essentially a one man business and can be operated without outside help. It is good summer and winter. It is growing each year. It can be started in spare time on an investment so small that it is within the reach of anyone.

When your spare time business grows to the point where it is paying as much or more than your present salary, it can be expanded—overnight—into a full time business. It can give you a sense of personal independence that will free you forever from the fear of layoffs, loss of job, depressions, or economic reverses.

There are only two requirements 1) You must have the kind of temperament that gives you pleasure from working with your hands. Two hours a day of manual work will keep your "factory" running 24 hours, turning out a product that has a ready sale and a steady sale in every community. A half dollar spent for raw materials can bring you six dollars in cash—six times a day.

There is not enough space here to tell you the full story, but if you are interested in becoming independent in a business of your own, in knowing the sweet fruits of success as I know them, send me your name. That's all. Just your name.

I will send you the facts that will enable you to check up on the opportunities in your own community and then if you decide to take the next step, I will allow you to invest $15.00. Even then if you decide that your $15.00 has been badly invested, I will return it to you.

There's no coupon on this announcement. If you don't think enough of your future to write your name on a postcard and mail it to me, forget the whole thing, but if you think that having this message come to your attention may be a coincidence that is more deeply connected to your destiny than either of us can say, then send your name. No salesman will call on you. I will write you fully and you can then make your decision in the privacy of your own home.

Soviets, their new and expanding seapower will act increasingly to influence the options open to the United States in the pursuit of our foreign policy. As a result of their concentrated development and building efforts in the 1960's, the Soviets have emerged as a naval power with first class capabilities to counter the naval power of the United Nations."

While the news media have been harping daily on what is wrong with America in Vietnam, this dramatic shift in the balance of power between America and Russia has gone largely unreported. The fact that nearly a quarter of a century of clear U.S. strategic superiority has ended has gone by unnoticed. The public is apathetic because it is not aware of these facts.

Constant attacks on the defense establishment, such as the so-called news documentary, The Selling of the Pentagon, have given people a pervasive suspicion that they are being scared into huge new defense expenditures which are not really necessary. There seems to be a frightening willingness to discount or disbelieve the warnings of government leaders about our deteriorating defense capability. Yet, while the Soviet Union is spending twice as much on defense in proportion to its gross national product as the U.S., the hue and cry for more defense cuts goes on.

The evidence is piling up that this nation is losing the lead in technology which for half a century has meant translating know how into goods which have brought in millions of dollars from abroad. Too often we overlook the fact that technological advance is a bread and butter issue—and that's jobs. In the military field it is a matter of survival.

Our total spending in research and development as a percentage of the GNP has been steadily slipping since the mid-1960's. In most other industrial nations the trend is in the other direction.

Efficiency of workers, measured by gross national product per employee, is growing faster in most major nations than it is here—60% more rapidly in Western Europe, 70% in Russia, three times as fast in Japan.

We have made tremendous progress in the last decade toward correcting the built-in injustices with which every society must cope and I believe few other societies would have done as much as we have. It is also this same system which protects the revolutionaries preaching its overthrow, and I might add, giving them unparalleled press coverage. I am simply pointing out these facts because too often they get lost in the hysterical chorus of what is wrong with America.

This brings me back to the responsibilities of the news media. The New York Times' coverage of the Pentagon Papers was a glaring example of irresponsible news reporting. The headline and lead editorial writers all went beyond the Pentagon Papers in conveying around the world that the U.S. alone was responsible for the escalation of the war in Vietnam through a secret consensus among the President and top government officials. None of these sensationalist charges of deceit were substantiated by the documents taken in the proper context.

Walt Rostow, President Johnson's National Security advisor, later said that there was indeed a consensus about the bombing in September, 1964—but it was not to bomb. He called the Times' coverage, the "shoddiest" piece of journalism and "as serious a misuse of the power of the press" as he had seen since entering public service in 1941.

Rostow, who was in a much better position to know the story of the Pentagon Papers, was buried in the back pages of the Times, while the charges of a self-appointed critic, an unknown professor, were given the full treatment of front page headlines and nightly news coverage.

What the stories didn't tell was that it was the Communists who started the war and forced the escalation. The stories also didn't say that through five successive Administrations the U.S. never used the power of which it was capable, never sought a decisive victory but used only the minimal force it considered necessary to keep South Vietnam out of Communist hands.

James Jackson Kilpatrick, himself a well-known journalist, expressed doubt over the accuracy of the reporting of the Laos invasion. He said, "A typical AP story described the action as a 'rout', based on a quote from a helicopter pilot." Kilpatrick goes on to say, "In our business the Associated Press is grandmother—what grandmother says is so. Yet the skepticism would not go away: Was this in fact a rout? Who were the unidentified pilots? Did they exist?"

The leadership of the May Day demonstrations in Washington was avowedly pro-Communist Viet Cong and anti-American. Its self-proclaimed purpose was to shut down the United States government. Yet for weeks afterwards The Washington Post worried daily that the rights of the protestors had been abused because they were arrested en masse. There was little comment about the civil rights of the citizens of Washington who were trying to get to work while their cars were being overturned in order to block traffic in the streets.

The question of distorted news coverage came up for the first time in the House of Representatives in connection with the CBS documentary, The Selling of the Pentagon. The House Commerce Committee had received many allegations, and had sworn testimony from people directly involved, that deceptive editing and production techniques had been used in various segments of this commentary. The Commerce Committee has jurisdiction over deceptive broadcast practices and has conducted other investigations in the past, all the way back to the quiz show scandals.

The Committee report on The Selling of the Pentagon said that "never before had it encountered the insidious practice of intentional altering of the words and thoughts of anyone who appeared on a news documentary broadcast." Taped interviews were cut and sliced so that the speaker was made to appear to be saying things he had not in fact said, and sometimes even the opposite of what he had said.

In order to determine whether deliberate falsification had occurred, the Committee issued a subpoena to CBS president Frank Stanton to supply the original tapes. Stanton refused to comply with the subpoena and was consequently cited as in contempt of Congress by the committee by a vote of 25 to 13. The issue was not an encroachment on the First Amendment, as CBS contended, but simply whether or not statements had been deliberately altered. Congress has a duty to oversee these practices because the airwaves belong to the public.

The House then voted and refused for I believe the first time in its history to back a committee recommendation for a contempt of Congress citation. When asked what this meant, Harley Staggers, the committee chairman who led the fight, said, "It proves CBS is stronger than Congress."

I do not know whether that is true, but I do feel strongly that rather than screaming "intimidation" everytime the news media are criticized, they should develop a professional ethic for objective news coverage and close their own credibility gap.

It is up to the American people to decide the directions in which they want to go and not up to a handful of behind-the-scene analysts who may be trying to sell their own ideas. If we are going to solve the problems that face us, what we need more than anything else is a fair presentation of both sides of an issue so that the American people themselves can be the judge.

Majority

A healthy economy will not solve all our problems, but without it we lack an essential foundation of a healthy and progressive society. A poor economy is a threat to a prudent defense budget and therefore to our hopes for peace.

That is why I say that those of us who believe that the nation needs a strong foreign policy backed by a strong national defense should be the first as citizens without regard to party to demand the economic policies required to achieve full employment, rapid growth, and stable prices.

For, make no mistake about it, the demand to do more at home is great and growing. Comparing 1970 with 1961, defense expenditures declined 17% of the GNP while all other government spending—federal, state and local—rose 20% as a percentage of GNP.

Clearly, this development is in response to very deep-seated political forces, and the pressures to increase non-defense spending while we continue to grow. Only a rapidly rising output of goods and services will enable us to respond to domestic needs without dangerous slippage in vital expenditures of defense and foreign affairs. This is why President Nixon has moved to strengthen the economy.

Some people are telling us that the end of the Vietnam war will cause a miraculous transformation abroad allowing this country to devote the same kind of effort to domestic needs. My reading is that any solution of the Vietnam problem will have to be followed by a more rather than less intense concentration on problems of foreign policy.

It is an illusion to think that other nations will allow America a breathing spell, that they will so-to-speak "behave," while this country concentrates on problems at home.

In fact, the more this country tries to ignore foreign dangers and problems the more foreign affairs will intrude on our domestic efforts, and the less chance Americans will have to employ rational and common sense policies at home or abroad.

While our energies have been absorbed in Southeast Asia the overall strategic balance has moved markedly in favor of the Soviet Union. Moscow has continued, at great cost, a comprehensive, forward-moving program of strategic and conventional weapons procurement that is not slowing down.

In past Soviet probings, the strategic inferiority of Soviet power and a restricted naval capacity have set definite limits to the extent of the risks that Moscow was willing to run. Khrushchev's back down in the 1962 Cuban missile adventure is a dramatic example. When the Soviets failed to take over Indonesia by indirect tactics, they did not directly intervene but let Indonesia slip away.

Today with the strategic balance tilting in its favor and with its growing naval forces, a more confident Soviet Union can be expected to accept a more extensive and dangerous range of risks in advancing its great power interests. We can look for the Soviets to seek targets of opportunity in many areas of the world, using their new strength to assure them needed military options. Thus new elements of intimidation and blackmail will be introduced into international relations, enhancing the dangers in crisis encounters.

The motto of the Kremlin is now doubtless: "No more Cubas; no more Indonesias." In days to come, we, and not they, will be expected to back down and accept diplomatic defeat.

A foretaste of how Moscow hopes to operate in the future could be the Soviet Union's recent 15-year treaty with Cairo, hurriedly saddled on Egypt when Moscow saw signs that Mr. Sadat might be getting unruly.

The treaty itself reads like recent Russian imperial history in a nutshell. It appears to have been hastily thrown together with clauses borrowed from treaties with Finland, Czechoslovakia, Poland and even France.

By imposing this treaty on Egypt, Moscow has firmly established a base from which to extend Russian influence throughout the Middle East and Mediterranean area.

Moreover, we are now involved in discussions and negotiations on a bilateral basis on a variety of issues with both Moscow and Peking and a triangular relationship is clearly emerging. It is safe to say that as time goes on this a fortune; there were men, women and children of all races and religions who were being caught up in an invasion of idiocy by a minority who demand, not just the obvious right to be heard, but the obvious wrong to maintain that the First Amendment belongs only to them.

Pathetic may be the word to describe the articulate voices of doom whose whisper is deafening and reaches through the waking moments to the ears of the young and the world outside which looks eagerly upon our demise.

I read once of a tree at the Kuhura gardens in Tokyo whose original owner had planted in a small shallow dish some 400 years ago. Through 19 generations the roots have been trimmed, branches cut and today, after 400 years, it is only 20 inches high with a twisted top some 36 inches across. This little tree shouts a warning to all America—the mind and soul can be cut back just like the tree, with the same result—a dwarf.

It is about time some of the editorial giants, some of the audio prophets of doom and many of the political pretenders to the throne stopped using the First Amendment to cover sins of omission and rather started to write and talk about the greatness of this nation and the heritage we enjoy. The vocal minority on the campus, on the streets and in the military have had their say, but in spite of the cameras, publicity, the pictures, the shambles of the courtrooms, God and this nation are very much alive.

You and I, fathers and sons before us, were part of the unselfish contribution this nation has made to the defense of mankind. Even today, without a declaration of war, more of our young are contributing their lives, their energies to a survival. Do you hear of the hundreds of thousands who have returned from Vietnam to become part of this gathering. No—the cameras and the typewriters are posed at the few who in many cases act ashamed of the uniform and may have forgotten the lessons of history. They speak for something and they have a right to speak, but are we to believe that the majority of Americans do not have a right to be heard too?

All this nation has done has not been that correct. Our society has not always been honestly patient within and without our borders. The cry for change is not new and deserves to be heard. However, in spite of the faults, in spite of dark moments which cannot be erased from any history—no nation since recorded time has given more to the world asked nothing in return; nor created a society where man has been given or has the right to assert, through law, the freedom and independence earned.

We are a peoples, made up of the stock of every nation of the world and in less than 200 years, in spite of the faults, promises, dreams, but with the accomplishments—we have become the most powerful entity in the world.

Do we teach that to our children in school? Or are we too weary now that prayers have been abolished, patriotism is "camp" and the Pledge of Allegiance has been under attack and even banned in some quarters. We print "In God We Trust" on our currency and ban his name in classrooms. It's a strange and complex society we share with our young.

We conquer space and the moon in the name of peace and science, then without a blush or sigh, some deny necessary funds so that the heavens are open to the Soviets and the men who made this an American dream are reduced to the unemployment rolls.

We hear leading voices charge the President and the head of the FBI with misconduct and the invasion of privacy, at the same time when government files are ransacked and burned; when secret documents are illegally released. When law and order are enforced—when insurgents storm the Capitol—the ordinary citizen is overwhelmed by Congressional and private sentiments that call for "apology" and damnation for any and all who dare to speak against this incursion.

Our survival, inside or outside this room depends on remembering one of the great lessons of history. The fact that liberty is not just a word, it is in the heart. And when it dies, as some would have it die, no law of the land, no words on a parchment, no dream, no tears, no court can give it back.

Those who represent the V.F.W. are also individually representative of the basic ingredients which have permeated the life blood of this land. We may differ in religion, hold divergent political views, follow separate goals—we, however, share the bond, the heritage, the pride of citizenship.

My pride today has been in addressing you because there is so much to do and part is proving to the world, as we prove to ourselves, that what is wrong with us, we will change and what is right—we will shout loud and clear.

You and I have been part of the tragedy of war, the search for peace and now we face the survival of the planet. Nothing is or has been easy but we have survived the less than 200 years with all of the bad and the beautiful—and we have done it as Americans, in love with America.

And that is what this nation is all about.
